Children are fighting for global climate justice and planting trees

Please register online!

Talking alone will not stop the glaciers from melting.

The Children's Initiative was founded in 2007 by the then 9 year old Felix Finkbeiner. While doing research for a school assignment Felix came across the story of Wangari Maathai, a nobel prize Laureate who had planted more than 30 million trees in 30 years. At the end of his presentation, Felix envisioned a future in which children could plant a million trees in each country of the world.

Become active for your future!

If some children plant a few trees, the single tree may not effect anything, but when the children get together all over the world and plant trees, we can change the world. This makes us strong! Felix, (12)

Children from more than 100 countries around the world have already joined Plant-for-the-Planet: Our goal is to empower one million children as Climate Justice Ambassadors in over 1,000 Academies worldwide by End of 2020. When we have an international network of active children we will be able to achieve anything!

We must work together. One mosquito wouldn't bother a rhino, but one thousand mosquitos together can get a rhino to change its direction. Jule, (13)

Purposes of the Academy

- To educate the children about environmental and justice issues and inspire them to take action.
- To give young Climate Justice Ambassadors the skills they need to empower their own friends and family about the vision to plant trees and achieve climate justice.
- To empower the children so that they too can tackle global challenges as part of a global movement.
- As Climate Justice Ambassadors they give presentations and empower other children to become Climate Justice Ambassadors as well.

Content of the Academy

Climate crisis, global justice and global citizenship

- What is the climate crisis and what does it mean?
- What is climate justice?
- How can we solve global problems as a worldwide network?
- Is there equality between the people in the north and the south?

Planting activities

- Why are trees so important for all of us?
- How do trees help against the climate crisis?

What can I do myself to get active?

- How can we empower our family and friends, our school, our town?
- How do we engage the media - newspaper, radio, TV?
- How can we organise a planting activity?

Join in

- as a child aged 10 to 12
- independently or as school class (ideally no more than 10 participants per school)
- ideally accompanied by an adult (e.g. teacher or parent) who will support the young Climate Justice Ambassadors
